About Me

My name is Jérémie Quenet and I am a videographer born in Nancy, France on March 16, 1990 and currently living in Tel-Aviv, Israël.

My passion for computers has been driving me since my early years : my parents bought their first Macintosh in 1996 and it was probably then that I found my way. In 1997, I came across the industry of cinema when I watched The Fifth Element by Luc Besson for the first time. It was decided. I knew cinema was gonna rule my life. I then started making some short movies with the help of my little brother and so until I reached 15-16. I stepped up my game when I formed 'La Chambre 316' with some classmates, a small acting group : we wrote, performed and directed our own videos that we made available to all (the website is surprisingly still online). Two years and thirty videos passed, our paths went in different directions and it was time to disband.

I immigrated in Israël in 2010 and spent a whole year learning hebrew in a specialized program, followed by two years engaged in the army as part of my mandatory military service. I hence served as a fighter in the Givati Brigade from August 2011 to August 2013. Once free of my duties, it was time for me to follow my dreams : I managed to get accepted in the University of Tel-Aviv where I studied what I always wanted to study : cinema and television.

After the University, I joined an Ashdodi newspaper as a director of the video department. During my year there, we shot more than 40 reports and interviews. Alongside with this responsibility, I also edited more than 300 films for companies and for particular on the famous website: fiverr. In 2017 I joined the television channel i24news as a CG Operator and got promoted as an Assistant Director in January 2018.
